THE STORMY PETREL.

Some of the Curious Superstitions of Old Sailors About the Bird.

One of the best known of the sea birds is the stormy petrel. It is often seen during storms, flying above the waves in search of the shellfish and other small animals that are brought to the surface by the tempest. The sailors call it "Mother Carey's chickens" and do not view them with much favor, owing to their being constant companions of storms. Jack thinks that rough weather may be expected when he sees petrels about, and is not quite sure that they do not in some way cause the tempest. When the bird is on the outlook for its prey, it seems to walk on the water. Hence the seamen of olden time, when they saw the petrel, called it the "Little Peter."

So far from the sailor's being superstitious as to the capture of another land of petrels, the Cape pigeon—which is of a black and white color and about the size of a turtle pigeon, I have known Jack to take a haul occasionally in capturing them for its prey. In southern latitudes the Cape pigeons follow a ship in thousands. The method of catching them is peculiar. A common bottle cork is tied to the end of a long piece of thread and trailed astern to the cork touches the water. This gives the required tautness to the thread. As the birds fly in clouds from side to side astern some of them constantly strike the thread with their wings, and the resistance is enough to turn them over it, when the thread is wrapped round the wing and the bird is hauled on board. In this manner I have seen hundreds caught in a day.

On one occasion a clipper ship, carrying passengers to India, captured pigeons by hundreds, and the surgeon by some mischance succeeded in entangling a stormy petrel.

Now the doctor was an enthusiastic naturalist and what to the sailors is known as a "landlubber"—that is, he was on his first voyage. The doctor at once took the specimen to his cabin and made preparations to skin and preserve it. In hot haste a deputation of seamen, headed by the old gray haired sailmaker, came aft with a request that the petrel be set at liberty, saying that otherwise the ship and all on board would surely suffer.

The doctor, somewhat muzzled, intended to set the bird free, but his enthusiasm as a naturalist prevailed over the superstitious warning, and when the sailors had disappeared the bird was added to his collection. The fact soon became known forward among the men, and the doctor was regarded with black looks by the crew for the remainder of the voyage.

In the course of time the good ship anchored in the High river, and that day at dinner the doctor suddenly died.

There was a gathering of the sailors around the windlass that dogwatch, and the doctor's sudden death was attributed by the superstitious sailors to his slaughter of the stormy petrel.—St. Nicholas.

A New Wrinkle.

"Please, sir, will you give me 5 cents?"

"Give you 5 cents?" echoed the young man in surprise, for his applicant was a pretty, refined looking little girl of about 10 summers, whose clothing looked as though she were a child of fortune, not of want.

"Yes, sir. I want it to pay my car fare with. I lost the nickel mamma gave me." Of course the young man gladly gave the girl the desired 5 cents, and she fairly beamed upon him. The incident happened at Broad and Chestnut street. Not long after the young man was waiting for a car on Walnut street, and it so happened that he was thinking of the pretty face of the child.

"Well," mused he to himself, "I'm glad I happened to be there in time. Some parents are awfully careless of their children, though. Think of the little thing having to ask for money. It's a shame!"

There came a slight pull at his coat sleeve. Then a sweet, weak voice that seemed familiar said, "Please, sir, will you give me 5 cents?"

The young man turned as if stung. He could hardly believe his own eyes. "You see, sir?" began the sweet voice again. "Yes, I know all about it. You lost the money your mother gave you for car fare."

It never phased the little one. She smiled divinely and answered, "Yes, how did you guess it?" But the young man had caught a passing car, and the look on his face set the passengers wondering.—Philadelphia Press.

THE HAWAIIAN QUESTION.

The letter written by the Secretary of State to the President on Hawaiian affairs purports to be a statement of facts. It states that the Queen would not have been deposed and that the Provisional Government would not have been established on the islands, had it not been for the pressure of United States marines. If such is the case the revolution at Honolulu was due to foreign intervention, not to a general uprising of the people against the monarchy. The adherents of the Queen were intimidated by armed forces landed from the American war vessels in the harbor of Honolulu.

Minister Stevens, by whose order the marines were landed at Honolulu, represented that it was done to protect the persons and property of American citizens. Special envoy Blount, sent to the islands to ascertain the facts in relation to the revolution, represents that the troops were landed to overawe the monarchists. If Stevens is correctly reported the United States had nothing whatever to do with deposing the Queen, whereas if Blount is not mistaken or misrepresented the Queen would have defended her throne had it not been for the presence of an armed force from the United States war vessels. Stevens raised the United States flag and established a protectorate over the islands; Blount ordered the flag lowered and left it to the people, so it is asserted, to determine what kind of a government they should establish. It is claimed that the majority of those having a right to vote in the islands do not favor annexation to the United States or any other government, and that the annexationists are not willing to submit the question to a vote of the people.

Judge Gresham, Secretary of State, was Circuit Judge of the United States for a number of years and resigned the position to accept a place in the Cabinet. He commanded the respect of the people as a jurist and had the reputation of being able and conscientious and thoroughly imbued with American principles. It is but reasonable to assume that the character of the man has not been changed since last March and that he is as honest, capable and conscientious now as he was while on the bench. If he is in possession of all the facts in the Hawaiian case his suggestions as to what the United States should do are doubtless prompted by a desire to deal justly and impartially with Queen Liliuokalani, but unless it is clearly shown that the United States is responsible for her dethronement its power should not be used to restore her government.

Let the United States prevent interference by foreign powers in Hawaiian affairs and when the people of the islands by vote express a desire to be annexed give the subject due consideration and if it is deemed best for all concerned provide them with a territorial government until they prove themselves worthy of statehood.

SMUGGLED AND UNDERVALUED GOODS.

The Supervising Special Agent of the Treasury Department shows that in the last year $353,748 was collected on a variety of smuggled, undervalued or falsely classified merchandise. He also testifies to the excellent work accomplished by the officers assigned to unearth the frauds at Portland, Oregon, and on Puget Sound. There is a duty of $12 per pound on opium, and the profit in smuggling the drug is so great that the Supervising Agent thinks it impossible to suppress it. It is brought across the line from British Columbia by the wholesale and the customs officers on the Sound are accused of being in league with the smugglers.

It is believed that the amount of money derived from the sale of merchandise confiscated for non-payment of duty and undervaluation is not a drop in the bucket compared with what the revenue has lost from those causes. It is assumed that not one in a dozen smugglers is detected, and that not one in fifty of the frauds perpetrated by rings in which customs officers and importers are jointly interested is ever discovered. As was shown in the Cashin-Reis cases in San Francisco, the revenue collectors are in collusion with the importers. The appraisers know by private marks what bales and boxes to examine, and were it not for accidents their rascality would not be unearthed. In consequence of this undervaluation, importers who are in the ring can undersell the merchants who pay the duty imposed by law on goods, and get rich at the business.

In several instances officials paid by the Government to collect the duty on imports have been shown to undervalue goods for a consideration; yet the Government winks at the offense and both the bribe-giver and bribe-taker are let off upon payment of a nominal fine.

The Supreme Court of Michigan has decided that the inmates of the Soldiers' Home at Grand Rapids are not entitled to vote in that township. The Court holds, however, that if the inmates take the proper oath their ballots must be received on election day.

A NEW ORLEANS paper says: "One of the most sublime sights of this age is the fellow who has only one pair of pants to his name, and that ragged and patched, contending for a money that will be good in Yarrup."

The steamer China broke the record between Honolulu and San Francisco, having made the trip in five days and fourteen hours.

A Race Between Two Ships.

TACOMA, Wash., November 13.—The British four-masted ship Olivebank, 2,650 tons, Captain Petrie, master, and the British four-masted ship Samaritan, 1,996 tons, Captain Deater commander, started yesterday on one of the longest distance races on record, from Tacoma to the English channel. Both ships are heavily loaded with wheat, the Olivebank's cargo being valued at $90,000 and the Samaritan's at $75,000. The Olivebank is bound for Havre and the Samaritan to Cork for orders. Both captains express confidence in their ships and say they will make a quick run, Captain Deater wagering an oyster supper he will make the run home in 120 days.

The Anarchist Conspiracy.

MADRID, November 13.—The authorities having been informed that an anarchist in the city were threatening to blow up the Bourse, all strangers will henceforth be excluded from that building unless identified. Three anarchists were arrested to-day at Barcelona. One anarchist arrested was the keeper of a tavern where anarchists have been meeting.

It is reported a clew has been found to the location of the head center of the anarchist conspiracy, which, it is said, has existed all over Europe and has branches in the United States. This report states there is a connection between the anarchists of Europe and those of Chicago. In the future no reports of trials of anarchists will be allowed published.

To Restore the Monarchy.

LONDON, November 13.—The Times publishes the following paragraph:

We learn, through a private channel, that on Tuesday the leaders of the Brazilian insurrection held a conference at which it was decided to hoist the Imperial flag and direct their efforts towards a restoration of the monarchy. This decision seems to have been announced by Admiral Mello to other revolutionary leaders by whom it was well received.

Laughs at the Idea of War.

DENVER, November 13.—F. M. English, ex-Secretary of Queen Liliuokalani of Hawaii, who, since the Queen was deposed, has been living in Denver, is jubilant over the position taken by Secretary Gresham. English says the facts set forth by Secretary Gresham's letter are absolutely correct. As for war and bloodshed, he laughed at the idea.

PENNOYER'S PROCLAMATION.

Senator Stewart Endorses Its Sentiments and Comments on the Situation.

Governor Penoyer has received the following letter from Senator Stewart:

WASHINGTON, November 5.
My Dear Governor:—I am glad to learn from your Thanksgiving proclamation that you are mindful of the fact that there is no reason to be thankful for anything that has been done during the past year by either legislative or executive department of the Government of the United States. Insolent hypocrisy, false pretenses and corruption, by which the gold ring elevated a man from Wall street to the great office of President, have produced results which have filled the country with want, misery and despair. Subjugation of the legislative department of the Government to the control of money-changers and stock gamblers through the instrumentality of money, a subsidized press and executive usurpation is a menace to constitutional government.

The decree which repealed the purchasing clause of the Sherman act and ratified and confirmed the infamous act of 1873, if it cannot be reversed, dooms the masses to poverty, misery and financial servitude. You are right. This is no time for gratitude except to the creator.

Organization to resist oppression of money powers and usurpations of the executive is the duty of the hour. The final battles for justice, financial independence and constitutional freedom must be fought in 1894 and 1895. The enemy of the people is entrenched in power and supported by every parasite, shynook and money-changer in Europe and America. Nothing can prevent the rule of the gold oligarchy but united and determined action by the people before they are subjugated and their means of resistance exhausted.

Thanking you for your noble and patriotic course, believe me, yours very truly,

WILLIAM M. STEWART.

IN OLDEN TIMES

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action, but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Rev. W. W. Tothero, accused by the Chicago Presbytery of immoral conduct, retracts his statement that he would make no defense. He declares he made no confession, and that he met Mrs. Hamilton at a hotel merely to confer with her concerning pending charges.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became a Girl, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

THE MIDWINTER FAIR.

Its Inception—Ground Broken August 24—Roofs of the Principal Buildings Now in Place.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 11, 1893.

The California Midwinter International Exposition will go down into history as an illustration of the most rapid development of a great enterprise that the world has ever seen. It was not until the last day of June, in 1893, that the proposition to hold an international fair in San Francisco, in midwinter, was even so much as thought of. On the evening of that day, at a banquet in Chicago, when several of the foreign commissioners to the Columbian Exposition were present, some one of the speakers incidentally remarked that part of the foreign exhibits would probably go from Chicago to Chili before being returned home. The thought immediately came to the mind of Hon. M. H. De Young, the California member of the United States Columbian Commission, that if these exhibits were to be available for display elsewhere, why not secure them for California, and why not, at the same time, advertise California's climatic advantages by holding a great International Exposition by the side of the Golden Gate at the season when the greater part of the world sits huddled around its fires, or wrapped in a mantle of snow.

On the following day Mr. De Young communicated this thought to several other prominent Californians who happened to be in Chicago at the time, and through their combined efforts, the Midwinter International Exposition began at once to assume shape.

GROUND WAS FIRST BROKEN

For this Exposition on the 24th day of August, and within a fortnight after, contracts had been let for the erection of five main buildings to cost about $400,000, though where the money was to come from was yet by no means certain. A popular subscription list had been started in San Francisco, and something like a quarter of a million of dollars was quickly raised, the rest of it seemed hard to get, but it came on little by little, and when work on these five great buildings began, new subscriptions began to pour in, until now the $400,000 is nearly subscribed, and there is enough more money in sight from the sale of concessions and from the rental of space in the Exposition buildings to warrant the assertion that the California Midwinter Fair will be open on the first day of January, just six months after its inception, and that when its gates swing ajar, it will not have a dollar of indebtedness, but that the receipts for admissions will not need to be diverted from the direct payment of the running expenses of the fair during the six months of its duration.

The five buildings grew apace; a penalty of $400 a day was a part of the Exposition contract with the builders, if they failed to finish the buildings within ninety days from starting. The result was that no five such buildings have ever, in the history of the world, been pushed forward so rapidly as these, yet they have been constructed under the personal supervision of competent engineers so that there can be no doubt of their stability and adaptability to the purpose for which they were planned.

THE BUILDINGS.

There is a building for manufactures and liberal arts 462x237 feet, Moorish in style, with a strong suggestion of the old California Mission architecture, and with a great wide gallery 35 feet broad running all around the interior; there is a building for mechanic arts 324 feet by 160 feet, purely East Indian in style and perfectly adapted for the accommodation of such exhibits as are usually found in Machinery Halls; then too there is a palace of horticulture and agriculture, almost a twin to the Mechanic Art building in point of size though entirely different in architecture. The fourth building is the Fine Arts palace, constructed of brick, for safety and durability, and finished in a pleasing Egyptian style. The fifth building, in this grand group, is the Administration building, where the offices of the Exposition management will be.

All these buildings have now progressed so far that the roofs are in place and in a few days more the early winter rains may come if they will and the interiors will be perfectly protected. The outside of the buildings are being covered with staff, and they present as solid an appearance as if made of granite or marble. These five main buildings are located around a grand central court, 900 feet in length and 600 feet in width, in the center of which a grand electric tower, 270 feet high, already begins to lift its head. In this grand court there will also be an allegorical fountain, emblematic of the history and achievements of the State of California, and also the grand electric fountains which created such a sensation in Chicago, and which are to be transported to San Francisco at an enormous expense.

In addition to these main buildings and the features of the grand central court, concessions have been let for a great many other interesting exhibits and displays which will cater very largely to the entertainment as well as the instruction of the public. The great cyclorama of the burning mountain will find a place in the Hawaiian concession. Heidelberg Castle will stand on an elevation with the German Village clustering around its base.

Very many of the oriental features of the Midway Plaisance have been secured, and a reproduction of the famous public Prater of Vienna has been arranged for. There will be an ostrich farm in full feather, an Arizona Indian village, a Spanish rancho, an electric theatre, a copy of the Ferris Wheel, 100 feet in diameter, a grand exhibit of sea-lions from the Santa Barbara channel, and an interesting exhibit of lions of another sort equal to the famous Hagenback Wild Animal exhibit on the Midway in Jackson Park.

IT WILL OPEN IN JANUARY.

These are but a few of the thousands of things that might be said in explanation of the development of this great Midwinter Exposition undertaking. It will open on the first day of January without fail, and everything is to be in readiness at that time. At the present rate of progress, this can be most positively stated. The great advantage of such an exposition, at such a time, is no longer a question in the minds of the people of California, and the dwellers in neighboring States are fast awakening to the opportunity offered in this connection to display their own products at great advantage. Nevada has already secured 2,000 feet of space. Oregon, Washington, Utah and New Mexico are also falling in line, and other States west of the Rocky Mountains will soon be represented there, to say nothing of the vast number of exhibits that have arranged to take up at San Francisco the work of advertising themselves which they began so successfully by the side of the Inland Sea at Chicago.

The letters daily received by the exposition management and the business and private letters of nearly every resident in California bear evidence to the fact that the usual number of winter visitors to the Pacific Coast will be multiplied a hundred fold.

The great Exposition which is to be spread out before these visitors, and before the hundreds of thousands of residents of this part of the United States who will throng Golden Gate Park during the winter, will surely be a subject of the most intense interest. It will be the aim of this correspondent to furnish weekly reports on the progress and promise of this Exposition, to note its most remarkable features, and to describe its most interesting scenes. If the public will accord their reading recognition of the efforts put forth in this connection, it will be furnished through this avenue with nothing but facts concerning the plans of the exposition management, and nothing but truthful descriptions of its accomplishments. F. H. TRUSDELL.

A DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.

A Five-Year-Old Child Shot by Her Brother.

Sheriff McCormick of Douglas county informs the Tribune of a sad and fatal accident that occurred at Springmeyer's ranch, in Carson Valley, Sunday afternoon. The nine-year-old son of Mr. Springmeyer found a shotgun in the barn, containing powder, but no shot. The boy procured some shot and placed it in the gun, and while imitating men shooting at birds in the presence of his little five-year-old sister, the gun was accidentally discharged (so the boy claims), and the charge of shot struck the little girl in the chin, tearing the whole side of her face away. Doctors were promptly summoned from Genoa, but could afford no relief. The child lingered in great agony until 6 o'clock yesterday morning, when she died.

He Went Go There Any More.

A young man (no names will be mentioned) took a horse and buggy and went to visit some lady friends in the neighborhood of Reno Sunday afternoon. The young ladies, two in number, shortly after the young man's arrival, excused themselves from the room and left a married sister to entertain him. After putting on their hats, the young ladies took seats in the buggy and started toward town for a pleasant drive. When the young man, tiring of waiting for the reappearance of the ladies he had gone so far to visit, got ready to depart he, of course, found his horse and buggy missing. He looked anxiously about for the missing steed, and not finding it concluded to hoof it to town. Upon arriving at the parental residence, he found his horse safely lodged in the stable, where the ladies kindly sent it by a male acquaintance after they had finished their ride.
